

JOURNAL CODE OF ETHICS

The journal follows the highest ethical and professional standards. This includes zero tolerance to plagiarism and other unacceptable forms of behavior within the academic community. Ephorus interface will be used for checking if the submitted papers are plagiaries i.e. if the rules of consistent quoting and separating personal judgments and conclusions from the others, were respected.

The following procedures will be treated as plagiaries:

- Falsifying research results, their fabricating and representing as real
- Manipulating with research procedures, intentional change or omitting data
- Seizing other people's results, attitudes or opinions as own without mentioning sources they were taken from
- Misusing research subjects or materials, trying to hush up possible violation of ethical guidelines, false representation of interests, confidentiality violation.

Only unpublished manuscripts are accepted. Accepting of categorized papers for publishing binds the author not to publish the same paper somewhere else without the approval of the journal editorial board.

While writing their papers the authors have to respect the plurality of ideas and approaches, exclude any kind of hate or discrimination speech on any basis and avoid conflict of interest in all forms.

Papers which do not follow these criteria will not be considered for publishing.